

CAMERON LITTLE

Australian Sustainable Cities Judge

Cameron Little has two decades of experience within the environment, sustainability and corporate social responsibility sectors and has been providing pioneering specialist sustainability support for the Australian events industry for the last ten years. In addition to a BSc in Environmental Biology he has trained in Environmental Auditing, Occupational Health and Safety, Workplace Training and Assessment, Sustainability Assessments and Permaculture.

Cameron's interest is in the design and application of sustainability systems for environmental, social and economic benefits across a range of business, community sector, education and governmental organisations. He takes techniques and lessons learnt from each of these areas to develop and embed effective policies, procedures and practices for organisations to achieve their sustainability objectives.

Through Sustainability Systems & Services, Cameron provides systems development, consulting and service delivery for organisations seeking to achieve a leadership position in sustainability within their industry. This has included providing assistance to government, industry bodies, the events industry, businesses, ecotourism operations, property developers, tertiary, secondary, primary and pre-school education sectors, community groups and households.

Cameron lectures and trains in Environmental Auditing, Environmental Management Systems, Sustainable Events, Permaculture, sustainable buildings and sustainable living. Cameron developed and delivers a Sustainable Event Management course for Australian Centre for Event Management and is one of the main trainers delivering training in Sustainable Events and ISO 20121 in Australia.

Within the Events Industry Cameron is the Lead Sustainability Judge for the Australian Event Awards, and also for the Exhibition and Event Association of Australasia. For a number of years Cameron was the environment industry judge for the National Local Government Awards in the Local Climate Change Action Category.

Cameron was a judge for Keep Australia Beautiful a number of years back and now he joins us again as the National Sustainable Cities judge for 2013.
